AROUND THE LEAGUE

Trop assessment could take ‘weeks’

The Tampa Bay Rays said it may take weeks to fully assess how much damage was done to Tropicana Field, which saw its roof ripped to shreds by the force of Hurricane Milton as the deadly storm barreled across much of Florida.

The team said no one was injured when the St. Petersburg ballpark was struck by the storm on Wednesday night. A handful of “essential personnel” were inside Tropicana Field as the roof panels were blown apart, much of the debris falling on the field and seats below.

“Over the coming days and weeks, we expect to be able to assess the true condition of Tropicana Field,” the Rays said Thursday. “In the meantime, we are working with law enforcement to secure the building. We ask for your patience at this time, and we encourage those who can to donate to organizations in our community that are assisting those directly impacted by these storms.”

Milton was the second hurricane to hit Florida’s Gulf Coast in the span of two weeks, preceded by Hurricane Helene, which flooded streets and homes on that same side of the state and left at least 230 people dead across the South.

The Rays aren’t scheduled to play in the ballpark again until March 27, when they are supposed to play host to the Colorado Rockies to open the 2025 season.

BRIEFLY

TWINS: The Pohlad family says it plans to sell the Minnesota Twins after 40 years of ownership. The Twins won World Series titles in 1987 and 1991. Since the turn of the century, they have won the American League Central Division title nine times and claimed a wild card spot once. Twins executive chair Joe Pohlad, a third-generation owner, said in a statement that he recognizes the team’s importance to Minnesota, and that will be a consideration in the process.

MLB: The price of a qualifying offer for this year’s major league free agents rose to $21.05 million from $20,325,000 last offseason, a $725,000 hike that represented a 3.6% increase.

STAT OF THE DAY

1-5 Since holding a 3-2 lead over the Diamondbacks in last season’s NL Championship Series, Bryce Harper and the Phillies are 1-5 in postseason games.
